gwen diamond & hillary scott

Gwen had her old college friend, Hillary come to visit for the day. They caught up on everything new and began talking about classes and days ahead. Gwen mentioned how she experimented with other women in college last year and how much she liked it. Soon they began kissing and got down and dirty. They undressed and licked each other's sweet pussies reveling in the sweet nectar and warm juices from their love.

My young wife looked like she had just received a cancer diagnosis. When she put the letter down and regarded me, her face frteighted with worry, Emma seemed to have aged ten years in a matter of seconds.

Just Another Dumb Townie Hick

I placed the letter on the table beside Emma's open textbook. Yellow highlighter in one hand, mug of steaming coffee in the other, she regarded me with mild annoyance.

"Not now, Glen. I'm trying to study."

"I'm afraid this can't wait," I told her bluntly.

"Tell that to Dr. Evans. If I fail his class I can kiss my scholarship goodbye."

"Read it, Emma."

The tone of my voice convinced her that I was dead serious. She sighed heavily, put down her things, and picked up the letter. I stood there in our tiny kitchenette, leaning against the counter and watching her face as she read the thing.

My young wife looked like she had just received a cancer diagnosis. When she put the letter down and regarded me, her face freighted with worry, Emma seemed to have aged ten years in a matter of seconds.

"You can appeal it," she said uncertainly.

"On what grounds? I'm healthier than a horse—"

"Declare yourself a conscientious objector. A lot of my classmates are doing that."

Cowards, I thought. Not that I wanted to fight. Hell, who did? But I didn't like the idea of trying to weasel my way out of the war. Call me old-fashioned, but that's not what a man does, not a real man.

Still, I hated like hell to leave Emma. Without my income, she would have to get a job. Her scholarship wasn't enough to live on. And moving in with her parents wasn't an option, not if she wanted to stay in school; her folks lived halfway across the country.

"What are you going to do, Glenn?"

I stood there in silence.

"You can't go," she said.

"I don't have a choice."

"I'm in school. They can't expect me to just drop out."

Poor Emma. For such a smart girl, she could be awfully naïve. "They," I told her, "don't give a damn about you or me." ey,hey

"Then why go? It's a stupid war. We shouldn't even be there in the first—"

"You're preaching to the choir," I cut her off. "And you need to study . . ."

She looked at me like I had lost my mind. "I can't study. Not now. We need to talk about this—"

"There's nothing more to say. I got drafted. Case closed. I don't like it any more than you do, but that's the way it is. Deal with it, baby."

"I can't believe you're going to give up so easily."

"I'm not giving up, Emma. I'm serving my country."

Having just gotten off the graveyard shift at the plant, I was too tired to argue. Emma relented. I tried to sleep, tried and failed. The letter had upended my world. Our world. I doubted Emma could study. I felt responsible. I shouldn't have shown her the damn thing, not while she was buried to her neck in schoolwork.

Stripped to my boxer shorts, I tossed and turned to the hum of the box fan Emma's parents had given us as a housewarming gift. I was scared. I didn't want to lose my legs to a landmine, didn't want to spend the rest of my life in a wheelchair. In sickness and in health. If I came home a cripple would Emma stay by my side? I couldn't blame her if she didn't.

I sensed Emma padding into the room before I saw her. The old mattress springs groaned as she sat beside me. Her back pressed to the headboard, she said, "I can't study."

"I can't sleep."

"We need to mellow out."

"Yeah."

Emma produced a joint, fired it up with a match. She took a deep pull, holding the smoke in her lungs for a long time before releasing it. We shared the spliff, passing it back and forth until it was nothing but a dead roach.

She lay her head beside mine and placed her hand on my chest. "How was your shift?"

"Same old shit," I muttered.

I hated my job. Emma had a hard time understanding why I kept doing something which made me miserable. Like I had a choice in the matter. I was a typical townie, a high school graduate who had gone straight to work at the plant. College had never been an option. My test scores weren't high enough, my parents' pockets not deep enough.

We came from different worlds, Emma and I. Her father was a cardiologist, mine a cop.

Emma ran her hand down my stomach, slid it under the waistband of my shorts. I crushed my lips to hers, probed her mouth with my tongue. She stroked me slowly. My cock responded, swelling and lengthening as she primed me with a deft hand.

Moments later, having kissed a trail down my body, she took off her clothes. Then she took me in her mouth. I lay there staring at the ceiling, stoned, marveling at her oral talents. Emma gave great head. Her lips wrapped around my prick, she pumped her head to and fro, faster and faster. My fatigue vanished, my fatigue and even the fear of what lay ahead, my world reduced to our tiny bedroom which smelled of the good grass Emma had gotten from some hippie professor.

Emma gave her mouth a rest. She raised her head and climbed on top of me, impaling herself on my rigid rod. I held her slender waist. She rocked her girlish hips, riding me slowly at first. It wasn't long before she picked up the pace. I dug my fingers into her taut flesh as she pogoed on my prick.

The slap of our bodies melded with the hum of the box fan. Emma stopped abruptly. She raised her hips and lay beside me. No words were necessary. I knew exactly what she wanted. And I wanted it too.

I rolled on top of her. Her thighs parted, she raised her knees as I plunged my cock into her cunt. Emma cried out, her outburst reverberating off the walls. I thrust repeatedly, driving my hips, fucking her with a series of stiff jabs.

I hadn't eaten a thing since lunch. Still, I lasted a long time, long enough to make Emma come before I pulled out and dumped my load on her flat tummy . . .

It was late afternoon when I woke up to an empty apartment. This was nothing new. Her note on the fridge told me that she had gone to the library to study.

I fixed two ham sandwiches and cracked open a cold can of beer. Sitting in the kitchenette, I ate and drank and reread the letter. I wanted to close my eyes and open them and find it gone, find the whole damn thing nothing more than a bad dream.

My plate cracked when I put it in the sink. I tossed the jagged pieces in the trash, reached for the phone, then changed my mind. Telling my folks would make it more real. We had talked about the draft countless times; the worst of these discussions had made my mother leave the house and go for a long walk. "It could happen," I had told my father in her wake. "She needs to accept that." "Your mother loves you more than anything in this world," he had replied.

Now it was a done deal. My ass belonged to Uncle Sam . . .

My shift didn't start until eleven. I didn't like to drink before work but tonight was different. The thought of stewing at the apartment all by myself was too much to bear. Besides, I didn't have to get drunk. I could just have a few beers and play some pinball.

I drove through town, my windows open to a beautiful Indian summer. The days were getting shorter. Pretty soon it would be dark by now. Then cold. I hated winter.

Still, it had to be better than the jungle.

Dave's was a college bar; definitely not my scene but I couldn't go to my regular haunt, not if I wanted to avoid the boys at the plant. Some of those fellows were cool, some not so much, the latter liable to tell my supervisor that they had seen me drinking just hours before a shift. Otherwise, I wouldn't have been caught dead at place like Dave's.

I saw mostly hippies as I sat at the end of the bar closest to the door. The draught beer was ice-cold. Everybody was smoking except me. I had never acquired the habit. A damn good thing, I reasoned. Cigarettes cut your wind, and I would be doing a lot of running in basic, even more in-country where I would be running for my life.

A little black and white TV on a high shelf behind the bar gave me something to look at instead of ogling sexy coeds, some of whom knew Emma and probably wouldn't hesitate to inform her of my wandering eye.

No doubt they wondered what she was doing with a guy like me. I wondered the same thing.

The national news never varied. War. Dead soldiers. Civil unrest.

A group of students abandoned the pinball machine to stand at the bar and watch the report. Just in time, I realized, for the President himself. They jeered and booed. The tallest of the scraggly bunch gave our nation's chief representative the finger.

It pissed me off. Dirty fucking hippie. A guy like him didn't have to fight. All he had to do was go to poetry class and the occasional protest.

The bartender asked me if I wanted another beer. I declined. Time to go. These kids were too much. I was liable to hit somebody.

"Fascist pigs," the tall one remarked.

He was referring to the helmeted cops on TV, a line of officers trying to maintain order at a demonstration that had turned violent. My blood boiled. Too close to home.

"Hey," I said loudly, "watch your fucking mouth."

Itching for a fight, I got up from my stool and walked toward the guy. He didn't smell so good.

"Some people have to work for a living," I told him. "Those men have mouths to feed."

Snickers and grins all around. I was a big joke, just another dumb townie hick. The bartender eyed me warily. He didn't want any trouble. I decided that I didn't either. The letter in my pocket was enough to last me the rest of my life.

I left the bar peacefully and climbed in my old car. Emma was sitting on the stoop when I got home.

"Did you tell your parents?" she asked.

"Not yet."

I sat beside her. She didn't press the issue, didn't even ask me where I had been.

"If I got pregnant—"

"Emma," I cut her off.

"Yeah?"

"What exactly is a fascist?"

summer bailey

Summer's over and she and Sascha find the vacation house to themselves. They were already quite horny by the time they figured out how to pass the time. She started things off with a great cock sucking session. Then he fucked her until her eyes rolled back. If this didn't help pass the time, then what will?

HAVE A SEAT

"Where am I supposed to sit?"

"You can start," I told her, "with my face."

Amber looked at me like I was nuts.

And maybe I was.

The lack of seating in my apartment was a deliberate strategy to get laid, to limit her options and see if she would take the bait. The plan had never worked before, but I hadn't given up hope. If at first you don't succeed, try and try again. That's what the say, anyway.

Amber searched my face, waiting for the punchline of what she thought was an elaborate joke. And why not? I was a standup comedian, and she knew it. We had met at a local club where I often performed; this after one of the best sets of my life. She had been impressed, so much so that she let me buy her a drink before giving me her phone number.

Now we were on our third date. This was the first time that Amber had seen my place. Not that there was much to see. Mine was a small apartment with a bed, table, and not much else.

"Well," she said, peering at my spartan pad, "my options are certainly limited . . ."

Amber caught on fast.

"My face," I told her with a wry grin, "is your best option . . ."

She didn't crack a smile. "I think you're right."

"I know I'm right," I said matter-of-factly.

No sooner had the words left my mouth than she started to get undressed. I did the same. Then I grabbed a large throw pillow from my bed, placed it on the floor, and stretched out for what I hoped would be an amazingly good time.

I had yet to fuck Amber—our first date had ended with a hug, our second a kiss—and was itching to do so. She had a hot body. Big natural tits, slightly curvy hips, and a mouth-watering caboose.

My dick was already hard when she turned around, straddled me, and lowered herself into position. I lay there on the hardwood floor, my head sandwiched between the pillow and Amber's wet pussy. I held her hips and employed my tongue, eating her cunt good and proper.

Amber sighed dreamily as I licked and lapped her slick trench, prompting me to double my efforts. Moments later, she started to move her hips, grinding her glorious gash on my face. With her blocking my view, I couldn't see my cock, but it felt harder than granite. Still riding my face, she bent forward and took me in her mouth. Her lips slid up and down my stiff schlong, matching the movements of her bucking hips as I continued to eat her tasty twat.

Having come up for a breather, Amber regarded me over her shoulder and said, "I want your big cock inside me, baby . . ."

I didn't even have time to respond before she turned to face me and dropped into the saddle. Having guided my dick inside her with one hand, Amber rode me like a cum-crazed cowgirl, her spectacular tits bouncing hypnotically as she pogoed on top of me. Holding on to those slightly curvy hips of hers, my dick sheathed in the snug embrace of her wildly pumping pussy, I mentally patted myself on the back.

My crazy plan had worked to perfection!

Amber rode me harder and harder until she came. Crying out loudly, she shook her head, all that shiny hair fanning wildly as she did so. Then she dismounted, sat on the floor beside me, and treated me to a spectacular hand job. My prick popped like a champagne cork, shooting much jizz as she finished me with a deft tugging motion.

"Where do you sit to watch TV?" Amber asked me after we had gotten dressed.

I WAITED UNTIL I HEARD HER DRIVE AWAY BEFORE OPENING THE DOOR TO THE SPARE ROOM WHERE I HAD HIDDEN MY LOVESEAT AND CHAIRS.

"I don't sit anywhere," I told her. "I lay in bed with a pillow propped behind my head."

"Where the hell do you eat?"

"I eat in bed."

"You're the strangest guy I've ever met," she said. "But I like you. You're cool."

"Thanks, Amber. I dig you too."

I waited until I heard her drive away before opening the door to the spare room where I had hidden my loveseat and chairs. I slid the items into their proper places, grabbed a cold one from the fridge, and plopped down on the loveseat. I watched a late movie and finished off a six-pack, not feeling the least bit guilty about deceiving Amber.

Hell, I had done her a huge favor.

These days, people have too many choices. Way too many. And all those many choices complicate matters, to say nothing of their sex lives!

maryjane johnson & ava taylor

Ava didn't even want to go over to her friend Maryjane's house, being depressed after learning her grades were not that good. But Maryjane convinced her to come over anyway. To Ava's surprise, their teacher was there and both girls took out their pent-up tensions on him. He gave them both an A++!

I came over to get naughty – and an A
